Changes to the Securitas Group Management team

Greg Anderson, Divisional President North America, has decided to leave Securitas.

Securitas is a world-leading safety and security solutions partner and provides outstanding services for our clients by combining our extensive presence with connected technology and intelligent use of data.

Greg Anderson, Divisional President North America and member of Group Management, has decided to leave Securitas to pursue an opportunity outside the business. This change is effective immediately, and José Castejon, COO North America Guarding and member of Group Management, takes on the role of acting Divisional President until a permanent successor has been appointed. All other Group Management members continue in their current roles.

- Greg is one of the important leaders who has helped develop our Guarding organization in North America into the successful, modern business it is today. I would like to take the opportunity to thank Greg for all the commitment to our business and dedication to our people which he has demonstrated since joining the business as an Area Vice President in 2010. I wish him the best of luck in the future, says Magnus Ahlqvist, President and CEO.
- I am confident that José, who has been an active part of our transformation together with the rest of our strong North America Guarding leadership team, will effectively manage both our existing successful business as well as continue to deliver on our strategic development plan. José has deep operational expertise and a track record of delivering results during his 17-year tenure at Securitas, and I am pleased to have our North America business in such safe hands during this transition period, continues Magnus Ahlqvist, President and CEO.
