Securitas President and CEO Alf Göransson exposed to stolen identity and falsified bankruptcy application

Securitas President and CEO Alf Göransson has been exposed to stolen identity and falsified bankruptcy application.

At the end of March 2017, Securitas President and CEO Alf Göransson was robbed on his personal identification, when a person made a loan application in Alf Göransson's name.

On April 5, 2017, the incident was reported to the police by Alf Göransson. Alf Göransson has not received any information about if the loan was payed, the sum and the kind of loan application.

On July 10, 2017, Alf Göransson was declared bankrupt by the Stockholm District Court, without any contact before the decision.

The decision by the Stockholm District Court is based on a falsified application, where Alf Göransson is requesting himself in bankruptcy. The incident has been reported to the police and the decision will be appealed to the Court of Appeal immediately today. The Bankruptcy Trustee appointed by Stockholm District Court has been informed and says he will support the appeal of the bankruptcy decision, which thereby is expected to be removed.
