Securitas is taking the security industry into the future

Today, Securitas has launched Securitas Future Lab on the web. Here we will publish a collection of the best ideas and new concepts from our global organization.

Security is changing and so is Securitas. Changing to better serve our customers and innovating to put technology to the best use possible. This also means opening up, putting our innovation on the outside instead of the inside, showcasing our ideas rather than hiding them away.

This is why we created Securitas Future Lab, www.securitasfuturelab.com - a collection of the best thinking and new concepts from every corner of Securitas' global organization. Some of these ideas and concepts already exist, while others are still in their infancy. We want to share our ideas with the world, with our customers, our partners and the industry at large, because we know that ideas always grow and improve when they are shared and discussed.

We will regularly publish new ideas and stories on our Future Lab website, www.securitasfuturelab.com. Make sure to subscribe so you don't miss any news.

To start with, we have published stories about the security officer of tomorrow and how technology will positively affect the important work a security officer is doing. There are also stories about how drones can support the security services delivered to the customers.

Securitas is also updating our brand concept and our visual design to a more modern, bold and vivid look. This will be realized and implemented in the organization worldwide during the coming months.
